"It was horrible the way they looked at him. I had an idea of what it meant and ordered the quartermaster and the mate to heave him overboard.

"He was smidships. The mate started from the forward part of the boat and the quartermaster from heside me. The men stood up and balked them. I can understand some German, and I knew what they were talking about. They wanted to eat that dead man.

"I hadn't been drinking any sea water, and but for the humbness of my legs I felt pretty vigorous. I asserted my suthority. We took that dead seaman and slipped him over the side. He went to the bottom like a chunk of lead.

"In the morning they made a proposition to me. They wanted to kill the crazy man and eat him. They said he was no good at the oars and of no use anyhow. There was he seemed to know what they were taiking about, and I thought that he would train the ropes and break loose.

"I forgot to say that after the proposition to cut up the crazy man the mate took all the knives from the nine and threw them into the sea.—I didn't find out until later that he kept two. He was a good, game man, that Gardes.

"The brigantine Mercedes sighted us on the afternoon of the thirtenth day. I had all I could do to keep the crew from jumping out of the boat. I don't want to say how we looked to those men that picked us up. All the skin was off my arms and hands from the elbows down, and off my legs from the knees down."

"It took a long time to get us aboard the Mercedes. I couldn't stand at all. The crazy man who went wild first fought tike an elephant. We were transferred to the steamship Zeno and taken to Waterford, Ireland, where the two crazy men recovered. The doctor said that If I had been expessed two days longer I would have lost both by legs."

Capt. Minot was taken to a hospital when he reached Waterford and for weeks he was unable to leave his hed. He leaves to-night for his home in Galveston.

Shook to University. President David Garr Tordan to-day said that the death of Mrs. Stanford would result in no change whatever President Jordan expressed great sorrow and said Mrs. Stanford's death was a great shock.

"In view of the fact," he said, "that Mrs. Stanford had been in such fine health, it was expected that she would live for several years. Her death at thic time was wholly unexpected."

Although the immense endowment of nearly twenty million dollars made by Senetor and Mrs. Stanford to the university was placed in the hands of trustees, Mrs. Stanford until the time of her death had control of the funds and the appointment of trustees. Almost the entire Stanford fortune now goes to the university. Mrs. Stanford had but one child, a son, who died at early age, and in memory of whom the Leland Stanford, Jr. University was founded.

Montford S. Wilson, attorney for Mrs. Stanford, stated to-day that he thought Mrs. Stanford had died from natural causes. While not denying that an investigation had been made here of Mrs. Stanford's illness, he said that the stories circulated about it were sensational and mostly without foundation.

An ol-goal of the Morse Detective Agency who investigated the first attempt by poison on the life of Mrs. Stanford, stated that ther was some foundation for the belief that she had been poisoned prior to her departure for Honolulu, Beyond that statement, however, he would give no particulars. 'A

Can Handle Heavy Traffic. The moving platform, its proprietors declare, can deliver 47.520 seated passengers per hour at any given point; whereas the subway has only a capacity of 28.680 seated passengers an hour in one direction (nearly 70 per cent, less than that of the moving platform). A six-foot space is provided beneath the platforms, and through this space the workmen can conveniently reach all the bearings and keep everything in satisfactory condition. Owing also to the conformation of the cars and tracks there can be no possibility of derailing. The absence of stops will also, it is claimed, enable the moving platform to carry 200 passengers for the same rate of energy and power that the Subway can carry ten.

I could have declined to grant the permit to use the Thirty-fifth street pier, but why send any contracting company three miles Thirty-fifth street pler, but why send any contracting company three miles away from the scene of its operations? That would have proved detrimental to city interests. It would have meant a three-mile haul of dirt over city streets and prolong the work of the contractors in the bargain. Women from the very first have fully appreciated the purity and sweet.

fully appreciated the purity and sweetness, the power to afford immediate relief, the certainty of speedy and permanent cure, the absolute safety and great economy which have made Cuticura the standard humour remedy of the civilized world

TORTURING HUMOR

Cured by Cuticura.

"I suffered five years with a terrible itching eczema, my body and face being covered with sores. Never in my life did I experience such awful suffering, and I longed for death, which I felt was near. I had tried doctors and medicines without success, but my mother insisted that I try Cuticura. I felt better after the first application of Cuticura Ointment, and was soon entirely well. Mrs. A. Etson. Belley entirely well. Mrs. A. Etson, Belle-
